Summary

Tomislav Medak earned a degree in philosophy and German studies from the University of Zagreb/Croatia (1997). His theoretical interests are in political philosophy, media theory and aesthetics. His recent research is on technologies, capitalist development and post-capitalist transition, with a particular focus on economies of intellectual property and unevenness of techno-science. At times, he also writes and presents on theatre, dance and politics.

Since early 2018 he's a PhD fellow at Center for Postdigital Cultures of the Coventry university with a thesis on technology, climate change and access to knowledge.

Since 1999 he has co-ordinated theory and publishing programme of the Multimedia Institute - MAMA, Zagreb. He is a Free Software advocate and project leader of the Croatian Creative Commons team. In 2012 he helped organize and co-ordinate the Croatian protests against the multinational trade agreement ACTA. More recently, he has worked with Marcell Mars on the activities of Memory of the World/Public Library, a project focusing on technologies and politics of "shadow libraries".

He has curated and organized a number of conferences and exhibitions dealing with tactical media, commons or cultural activism, most recently conferences "The Idea of Radical Media", Zagreb (2013) and "Economy of Crisis Capitalism and Ecology of the Commons", Zagreb (2012). Working together with Marcell Mars, he has curated a series of exhibitions around Memory of the World/Public Library project, most notably in 2015 at Galerija Nova (Zagreb), in 2014 at Württembergische Kunstverein (Stuttgart) and in 2012 at the HAIP festival (Ljubljana). Earlier they organized together an exhibition on the history of hacking "System.Hack", presented between 2005-2007 in Zagreb, Belgrade and Novi Sad.

Since 2001 Tomislav Medak has also worked as an artist with the internationally acclaimed theatre collective BADco. As a dramaturge, director and/or performer he has made a number of staged works, including Spores (2016), A Pound of Hysteria, Acceleration... - Melodrama (2013), The League of Time (2010), 1 poor and one 0 (2008). Together with the collective he has created interactive installation works, such as Responsibility for Things Seen, initially presented at the Croatian exhibition at the Venice Biennale in 2011.

He is also a volunteer for the urban activist group Right to the City Zagreb.
